

Mexicali Facility – Temporary Closure

The COVID-19 coronavirus pandemic has created an increasing number of hurdles which many businesses across the globe are encountering, resulting in new and dynamic social and economic pressures. Global efforts at this time are focused concurrently on lessening the spread and impact of this virus and proactively responding to this public health emergency. As we manage through this pandemic together, our top priority is the health and safety of our employees. Chromalloy is continually evaluating the hygiene and social distancing measures at all of our facilities worldwide, including Mexico, to ensure our workers' safety and compliance with all government guidelines and regulations.

Chromalloy has been recognized as a leading supplier of critical components and services, by many of its customers, in support of gas turbine engine platforms and product lines that are vital to critical infrastructure such as transportation and power generation as well as defined as an essential business under federal and state guidance in the United States, Mexico and abroad. We will continue to work tirelessly taking every action possible to both assure the health and safety of our work force and continue to provide world class support to our customers and business partners.
